Millions and New Albany Across River Nearly Swept Away

Jan 27—A body laden with home goods was swept away by flood waters in Louisville, Ind., today.

Dr. Hugh H. Miller, who has been in the city since the first day of the flood, said that the death toll was rising rapidly.

Three days of rain had done much to raise the water level in the Ohio river, and the city was now in a perilous position.

The city is now a vast sea of mud and water, and the people are in a state of panic.

Quick Response Is Made Here As Red Cross Asks for Unlimited Donations

Chapter Requested To Increase Original Quota of $800 at Least Five Times, $4,000 Already Forwarded; Other Agencies Rush Collections

A call for unlimited funds to flood relief came to Marion county today as residents began their fifth day of emergency response to the appeals from the devastated areas.

The only limit to Red Cross assistance must be the maximum generosity of the American people. National Chairman Carl T. Grayson said in a telegram received by Harry E. Margwarth, chairman of the Marion county Red Cross chapter and other chapters throughout the country.

The message asked all chapters to raise at least five times their original quota which in the case of Marion county would be $4,000 based on a first appeal of $800.

Marion county today sent an other check for $2,000 to the Red Cross and tons of clothing and canned food to the receiving headquarters in Columbus, Zanesville and Cincinnati.

HOW YOU CAN AID FLOOD SUFFERERS

Unlimited funds cannot provide bedding, blankets, medical supplies, oil stoves and new clothing are needed in the flood areas. Marion county residents can help by contributing in these ways:

Money: Take cash and checks to Marion County Red Cross office second floor of Y. M. C. A. building, South State street or place in containers at stores and banks. Phone 7493 if impossible to be in uptown district and money will be called for at home.

Provisions: Supplies and clothing. Take to American Legion Dugout on South High street, Salvation Army hall at 403 West Center street, Veterans of Foreign Wars room at 115 1/2 South Main street, Junior Chamber of Commerce room, 133 East Center street. Collections will be made at home if calls are made at these places. Legion at 2084 4126 6182 4173 Army at 7168 V. F. W. at 3334.

Ready for New Call

When the first appeal for $800 came we knew additional funds would be needed. Mr. Margwarth said today. Many persons from all over the county have responded to the call. We are depending on the word of those people and hundreds who have not yet responded to go many times beyond that first quota. Many have said if you need more call. The call has come and we cannot fail the thousands of refugees.

The latest appeal from Chairman Grayson read as follows: Flood suffering has already reached unprecedented proportions with relief needs steadily mounting. Under these conditions it is impossible now to name the final goal for funds. The only limit to Red Cross assistance must be the maximum generosity of American people. Every possible member of the National Red Cross staff is now assigned to the field for relief duty. Call upon all chapters to assume full initiative in their respective jurisdictions and mobilize every

IN PORTSMOUTH REFUGEE TRAIN

The International News Service photograph above pictures weary and drenched men, women and children aboard one of the refugee trains bound from Portsmouth to Columbus where accommodations have been provided for approximately 5,000 flood victims.

This International News Service photo shows one of the steps being taken to guard against flood devastation as the raging river waters move westward and outward. This is an aerial view of Bluffs point. No levee as government engineers dynamited it and permitted 131,000 acres of farm land to be inundated after state troops had forced armed farmers to leave. More than 250 families were forced to flee their homes in the area between Bluffs point and New Madrid. Both cities were ordered evacuated.

Generals of Four Corps Areas Prepare To Act Soon as Torrent Arrives

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—The army organized today for the greatest task of evacuating thousands from the Mississippi river valley if the waters threaten life.

At President Roosevelt's direct order, General Wooding ordered commanding generals along the more than 1,000 mile stretch of the river from Cairo, Ill. to New Orleans to be ready by 6 p. m. Friday night to move to higher ground a minimum of 500,000 persons living within 50 miles of the river.

Simultaneously with the extra ordinary plans for the huge task war department spokesmen said a minimum of seven days would elapse before it is known definitely whether the swollen tributaries will cause serious damage along the Mississippi. They said the peak danger point may not be reached for two weeks.

CHILD DIES AFTER SWALLOWING PILLS

13-Month-Old Baby Finds Medicine on Chair, Born in Richmond.

Thirteen-month-old Ronald Almon Oberdier only child of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Oberdier of 722 Bennett street died in convulsions last night at 4 15 four hours after swallowing a quantity of patent laxative tablets containing strychnine.

It is believed the baby swallowed eight of the tablets, which were laid on a chair in a downstairs bedroom while the mother and father moved a dresser to an upstairs room. The bottle, closed by a screw type cap which apparently had been loosely fitted, contained 12 tablets. When the mother began to search for a possible cause of the baby's sudden illness, only four tablets were found in the bottle. The baby was lying on its back in bed and apparently had pulled the bottle up to the chair on which the bottle and tablet container had been laid while the dresser was being moved.

Mr. and Mrs. Oberdier moved the dresser about 3 1/2 hours after the death of their son. Mr. Oberdier, employed at night at the American Machine and Foundry Co., went to bed shortly after Mrs. Oberdier came home from work. The baby began to cry and was laid down in the bed. The mother went to the baby and found it was dead. The baby was lying on its back in bed and apparently had pulled the bottle up to the chair on which the bottle and tablet container had been laid while the dresser was being moved.

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN

BY FREDERICK JACKSON

"I thought I would run over and see Lorna. She's been on my mind ever since I heard the news this morning—and we're very old friends—and I thought I would just run in and say what I could to comfort her and ask if there was anything I could do. I thought I could do that without arousing any suspicion."

Both men nodded swiftly. Anne went on. "But when I got there, I found a police officer—Chief Inspector Hagedorn—questioning the servants. He was standing just behind the door when the door opened, so I didn't have a chance to retreat even if I had thought of it, which I didn't. It seemed to me a splendid opportunity to find out what I could—perhaps what the police are thinking—and planning. So I opened my eyes wide at Chief Inspector Hagedorn and was every bit as simple as I could be. He seemed rather simple himself, and I reminded myself that he might be opening his eyes wide and acting artless, too, so I was on my guard."

She smiled. Austrelitz smiled back at her approvingly. "Well?" urged Bigelow impatiently. "Well—he begged me most politely to walk in and proceed to question me. He learned that Lorna and I had been children together, and that I knew Dryden intimately, and couldn't believe he could be capable of such a crime, and that I was sure if he had done it, he'd say so at once. And that I knew Vronski very well and had no idea why he and Dryden had quarreled—if they had quarreled. You can imagine the course I pursued. Then he wanted a list of Lorna's family and friends and I told him to look in the Blue Book for she knew everybody, of course."

"But that line of inquiry puzzled me, so I asked a few questions, declaring my anxiety to help him in any way that I could. And he told me that shortly after her husband's arrest, Lorna had put on her coat and gone out, without saying a word to anyone—and she hasn't come back. Naturally, the police weren't watching her for they had no reason to believe that she would vanish like this. And there were a lot of questions they wanted to ask her. And they can't imagine why she should have run away, because a wife can't be compelled to testify against her husband. But she's gone, without even a night gown or tooth brush. And her two aunts and her grandmother in Connecticut all swear they haven't seen her and have no idea where she is. Now what do you make of that?"

There was an instant's silence as both men thought over her story. "I find it most extraordinary," said Austrelitz at last. "Most." "So did I," said Anne. "Lorna has never been the type to avoid publicity. And I should have expected her to back in the limelight, now, and give indignant interviews and pose for sweet, pathetic photographs. I mean she's not terribly brilliant, you know, but she's not a complete fool, and she would surely have realized that she could have helped Dryden more by standing by him than by running away. It's bound to look as if she is afraid and has something to hide."

"That's so," agreed Bigelow, looking from Anne to the doctor. The doctor pressed the floor in silence, his brow knit in thought. For a long time, the others watched him saying nothing. "Would it have been possible?" he began at last, halting to face them both directly. "For a fifth person to enter the studio—unseen by the rest of you—on the night of the killing?"

"A fifth person?" repeated Anne, staring. "Yes. Four of you returned from the night club together—you and Bigelow and Madame Karsanoff and Vronski. What happened directly you arrived?"

They suddenly grasped his meaning. "We entered and looked about," said Bigelow. "Then Anne went into the kitchen to set out bottles and glasses. I joined her to tend a hand. Vronski went to the telephone and Karsanoff remained with him."

"When I arrived—long afterward, of course," said Austrelitz, "the door downstairs was open so that anyone could enter without having to wait to be admitted."

"Yes," cried Anne, "I left it that way when we came in."

"Ah. And the upstairs door? I had to knock, there."

"Yes, said Bigelow. "I don't believe the upstairs door was left open at any time."

"Can you be quite sure? Who came in last?"

Anne half closed her eyes, thinking. "Vronski, I am sure she said. 'I came in first and switched on the lights. Karsanoff followed me—"

"That's right!" cried Bigelow. "Then I came and Vronski brought up the rear."

"So that he might have left the upstairs door open—for all you know to the contrary?"

"Yes, I suppose so," admitted Bigelow. Anne nodded agreement. "And if Dryden had been following you, he might have come in and shot Vronski—unknown to you.... According to his story, he didn't see Vronski at the night club and went off to seek him elsewhere. But his story isn't necessarily true."

Bigelow and Anne were regarding each other searchingly. Austrelitz noted this and smiled faintly. "You are both thinking that Dryden could not have slipped in and shot Vronski because you think you know who did. But as a matter of fact, you know nothing. You are both guilty—merely of jumping to conclusions. You refrained from asking each other questions because each of you thought you knew the answer. And each hesitated to force the other to an admission. Whereas I—an outside onlooker—perceived at once that Bigelow suspected Anne of shooting Vronski and Anne suspected

Bigelow which proved that neither could actually have done it. Bigelow and Anne stared at him. Both colored guilty, but their eyes were shining as they turned again to regard each other. "But you behaved as if you were guilty?" cried Anne, protestingly. "I didn't," declared Bigelow emphatically. "I couldn't have. But I certainly thought you did."

"You both behaved," smiled Austrelitz. "as if each thought the other was guilty. You were doing your best to shield each other. It was quite charming."

Once again, they blushed, although they laughed a little. "You see we couldn't be sure," explained Anne, "because I had admitted that I hated Vronski and he had offered to deal with him for me. And I had gone into the bathroom. But there was another entrance to the studio from there, through the bedroom. Just as there was a way in from the kitchen through the hall!"

"I thought Anne must have done it on account of the gun," said Bigelow, a little inclined to defend his position. "She could easily have got it from the bed-side table on her way through the bedroom, you see—whereas how would Karsanoff have known it was there?"

"She couldn't have," admitted Anne. "And you couldn't have, either. That fact has been puzzling me all along."

"Are you certain that Vronski was actually killed with your automobile?" asked Austrelitz. "Yes, certain," answered Anne. "I recognized it at once."

"And there was one bullet fired from it. I examined it before I disposed of it," said Bigelow. "It's a baffling problem," admitted Austrelitz. "If Karsanoff wouldn't have known where to find it—I suppose Dryden would have faced with the same difficulty, even if he had been able to get in unseen and unheard."

"Besides, according to his story, he was already armed," pointed out Bigelow. "One would assume that he would have used his own gun, since he had brought it for that purpose."

Karsanoff answers an important question for the doctor, tomorrow.

TRAFFIC BLOCKED BY FALLEN HORSE

Automobile traffic was blocked for about 20 minutes yesterday afternoon at the Leader street railroad viaduct, when a horse was unable to arise after it slipped and fell on the ice pavement. The animal, owned by Fred Cloth of Kentucky street and Grand avenue, was pulling a wagon load of corn fodder at the time. It was necessary to unharness the horse, and it took the combined efforts of six men to assist it to its feet. The horse, apparently unhurt by the fall, was harnessed to the wagon and driven away from the scene. VENDORS MUST FILE REPORTS BY SUNDAY

Tax Examiners Ready To Take Returns for Last Six Month Period.

Warning to all retail vendors in Marion and vicinity to file their semi-annual sales tax reports before Sunday was made today by Carol W. Davidson and Charles Ellicker, sales tax examiners for this district. All vendors, no matter what the size of their business, must file reports if they still have their vendor's license, they said.

In previous semi-annual report periods as many as 45 per cent of the approximately 3,000 vendors in the county failed to make their reports on time, the examiners said. The penalty for late filing is 15 per cent of the tax collected. Vendors may file their reports either with the examiners in the office of the county commissioners at the courthouse and send them directly to the state tax commission at Columbus.

President's Mother Helps
Plan N. Y. Birthday Dance

Ball Here Saturday Night Will Be Informal But in Many Places Will Be "Dress Up" Affair.

Marion's dance Saturday night at the Elks hall in honor of President Roosevelt's birthday anniversary and to raise money for infantile paralysis victims, will be informal as to dress, but in some cities heights of formality will prevail at huge birthday balls.

Smart feminine New York is preparing to deck itself in the national colors, flag blue, flag red and white to dance at the ball at the Waldorf Astoria, one of the most elaborate of the more than 5,000 celebrations to be held throughout the country.

Chosen from a silk flag by Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, with the assistance of New York debutantes who will take part in the birthday ball pageant at the Waldorf, the colors have been selected by many of Manhattan's best dressed women for their gowns.

New York designers also have seized upon the colors as offering interesting possibilities for late winter models which will make their first appearance at the birthday parties.

Among a number of advance models introduced at a showing in New York this week was one of white silk tulle, with a cluster of flag blue chiffon flowers across the left shoulder. Another of flag red silk crepe had its wide circular skirt bound with narrow grain ribbon in flag blue.

A number of society girls and young matrons whose clothes make fashion headlines are planning to introduce the official Birthday ball colors into evening ensembles by use of flower corsages and flower hair ornaments in the chosen hues.

Fifty-five of the New York Four Hundred's prettiest junior members, dressed as candids, will pay tribute to the President at the smart Waldorf Astoria affair.

Ten of Manhattan's most famous night club orchestras will play at
